

Personal Finance: Tools for Decision Making

A feature-rich, engagingly written personal finance text that uses many examples and stories to show how the details of managing personal finance assets actually play out in real life. The book teaches lifelong decision-making skills, speaking to beginners in personal financial management no matter their age and life experience. It takes a hands-on approach to analysis of personal finance decisions, providing numerous opportunities for students to exercise critical thinking skills and implement a decision-making model. It incorporates a unique interdisciplinary perspective that draws on economics, accounting, finance, consumer law, tax law, and consumer psychology to emphasize the integrated context in which all good financial choices should be made.
